

STRIKERS MAKE WAR ON NEGROES

Twelve Severely Injured In Clash At Forty-Sixth Street This Morning.

STUDENT MAY DIE OF INJURIES

Many Of The Colored Strike-Breakers Refused To Go To Work, Saying They Would Not Fight White Men For $2.50 A Day.

(SPECIAL BY SCRIPPS-M'RAE.)

Chicago, May 3.—By all calculations the teamsters' strike should reach its climax today. A renewal of violence is expected with strong possibility that the state troops may be called into action, which step will be the beginning of the end. Five hundred additional policemen went on strike duty this morning. The employers will attempt to send out six hundred wagons under police guard today, instead of eighteen hundred as planned. The police report that many negro strike-breakers refuse to go to work today or leave the barns where they are housed. They say they were not brought here to fight white men and will not do it for $2.50 a day.

Twelve Injured In Clash
Chicago, May 3.—The trouble began early. At Forty-sixth street a gang of negro strike-breakers, who arrived from the south at six o'clock, encountered an angry crowd of union sympathizers. In the clash which followed twelve were severely injured. Edward Boswell, a colored student of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, was mistaken for a strike-breaker at the corner of Twenty-sixth street and Stewart avenue and so badly beaten that he may die.

Several Shots Fired
Chicago, 1:00 p. m.—Riots attending the progress of the caravan of wagons through the center of the city at eleven o'clock resulted in the serious injury of three men. Several arrests were made. Four men were arrested for a riot at the corner of Washington and Wabash avenues, following an attack on the wagons of the Daniels Coal company. Two men were injured. Several shots were fired.

Union Teamster Arrested
Chicago, 1:15 p. m.—Michael Hogan, a union teamster, was arrested this noon for obstructing the street with front seats of express wagons to prevent carrying government money to the treasury. It was the first arrest under the federal injunction.

Curry May Lose Eye
Chicago, (11 a. m.)—Strikebreaker, Frank Curry, the man with the "iron nerve" has been knocked out. He did not appear as a leader of the non-union forces this morning. It is reported that he will probably lose an eye as the result of an encounter with a union teamster yesterday. He also had a severe cut on the head. All express companies put out wagons this morning under a strong guard. Twelve large downtown office buildings were deprived of coal by the strike of the drivers of the Cregar Clutch Coal company this morning.

Chicago, May 3.—Lawlessness prevailed in Chicago yesterday. The most violent disturbances that have been known here since the American railway union strike of 1894 marked the bitter progress of the teamsters' conflict. And there now is no prospect of peace.

The outlook, however, is that federal or state troops, or both, will be called for by Thursday night. If the violence of yesterday is repeated today, it is the intention of the business men, united in a solid front, to demand the protection of the law, including the presence of the soldiers.

HOST GOES TO NEW YORK TO PRY INTO EQUITABLE

With Other State Commissioners He Will Seek Joint Examination of Big Company's Affairs.

(Special Correspondence.)

Madison, Wis., May 3.—Insurance Commissioner Zeno M. Host left for New York last night to attend an important interstate conference of commissioners of insurance, at which the matter of the disruption among the officers of the Equitable Life Assurance society will be discussed and it is possible that concerted action will be taken to secure an interstate joint examination of the affairs and management of the big company, with the purpose of protecting the policyholders of the several states participating in the examination. Commissioner Host some time ago was corresponded with by officials in New York, asking him if he would undertake to conduct an examination of the Equitable, and while he did not absolutely refuse, he made the suggestion that the most effective and Employers Make Demand.

The employers sent the mayor a letter announcing their desire for additional police to protect 1,885 wagons to be started this morning, making deliveries for thirty-three express companies and retail stores. With the mayor's approval Chief O'Neill immediately made a requisition on the civil service commission for 1,000 new patrolmen, and from this number he expects to get 500 extra men ready for immediate service.

O'Neill Addresses Inspectors.

The city authorities were staggered by the plans of the employers to start so many wagons, and the impression gained that an attempt was being made to force a confession of police inadequacy. Chief O'Neill called his inspectors into conference and said: "I have been up against a peculiar proposition. I got a letter from Mr. Thorne of Montgomery Ward & Co. telling me that the intention of the merchants he claims to represent is to send out almost 1,900 wagons from almost as many points in the city, and asking that they be given police protection. There are not that many policemen in Chicago.

"Fearing the result of arming non-union teamsters with rifles as was proposed, Chief O'Neill called in Attorney Sincere of the Employers' Teaming Company and requested moderation. Mr. Sincere promised that no rifles would be given out.

Arms for Non-Union Men.

Arms openly displayed on wagons were seen during the day, however, and proved effective in keeping riotously inclined persons at a distance. Frank E. Scott sent out five wagons, on each of them there was a non-union teamster with a shotgun between his knees. The wagons were unprotected either by injunction or by police, but passed unmolested all day through crowds of strikers.

"The display of the gun on each wagon seems to be protection enough," said Mr. Scott. "There was no trouble and I shall have more wagons running in the same way."

Teaming Companies Stand Pat.

The executive committee of the Employers' association met at the Union League club and discussed strategic measures. Word was brought to the committee that Arthur Dixon and his fellow employers in the transfer and teaming business refused to accede to the demand and deliver to the boycotted stores. The ultimatum delivered to the five transfer companies was served on half a dozen other members of the Team Owners' association. There followed a meeting of the transfer men and a decision to defy the threat that they would lose their railroad business.

The report of this decision caused a stir in the meeting at the Union League. A dozen merchants offered on the spot to withdraw their cartage business from the teaming companies.

Mark Morton also started out to divert railroad teaming from the concerns. He went to the office of the Employers' Teaming company and made arrangements to give the company a part of the freight business of two railroads which is now divided among half a dozen of the teaming companies.

VAN HISE'S PLANS IN FOR AN UPSET

If Legislature's Committee on Claims Don't Alter Determination to Cut University Appropriation, Bill.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Madison, Wis., May 3.—Unless the joint committee on claims revises its determination in regard to cutting down the university appropriation bill, the extensive plans of President Van Hise for the improvement of the state's chief educational institution will have to be temporarily laid aside or abridged until adequate money is secured from the state for their fulfillment. The original appropriation bill provided for a regular annual appropriation of a sum not less than two-fifths of a one-million tax on each dollar of assessed valuation in the state, to go to the university. With this stated annual income, which would be permanent and not subject to the changing opinions of biennial legislatures, President Van Hise planned to build dormitories, student commons, enlarge departments and buildings and bring the staff of instruction up to the number of efficiency required by the multiplication of the number of students which has come in the past few years. It is customary for appropriation bills to be put into the legislature for sums much larger than the authors of the bills really hope to get, in the contemplation that the economically-inclined legislators will cut them down. The university lobby, as the representatives of that institution before the legislative committees are called, declare that the regents drew the margin of economy and that it was not intended that the figures be scaled on the usual plan. The committee on claims, concluded to cut the permanent income from two-fifths to two-sevenths of a mill, and this proposed change was politely, but vigorously, opposed in a hearing before the joint committee on claims Tuesday.

DOWNFALL DUE TO HIS LAXITY

Now Denied That Banker Bigelow Lost Fortune In Attempt To Corner Wheat.

DELUDED BY THE SINGLE IDEA

That He Was A Great Financier The Milwaukee Man Was In Reality Lacking In Good Business Ability, Says Friend.

(SPECIAL BY SCRIPPS-M'RAE.)

Milwaukee, Wis., May 3.—According to an intimate friend, Frank G. Bigelow, the defaulting bank president, did not lose his money in a wheat deal. The friend declares this story untrue and says that Bigelow himself will deny it emphatically. Bigelow's friend attributes the disaster to an overabundance of confidence in ability which he did not possess. He declares Bigelow, if asked, would be unable to tell how the money was spent, and says his affairs are in a remarkable tangle.

Banker's Friend Explains.
"To my mind," said Bigelow's friend, "there is no reason to believe that the defalcation dates back more than comparatively a few years. Ask him point blank, he might say five or six years. Again, he might give some other answer, for he really does not know.

"As to his alleged defalcation from other banks, isn't it a banker's business to see that he is secured? Looking at it from a purely business standpoint, it is impossible to steal from a bank if the business of the bank is safeguarded. For instance, one company in St. Louis loaned Mr. Bigelow $50,000. Bigelow gave as security stock in the First National bank worth much more.

Did Not Mean to Defraud.
"There is no reason to suppose that he meant to defraud the St. Louis institution. There was nothing about him to indicate that he did. He paid the interest regularly and as a matter of fact did not intend to be dishonest. He thought he was a financier. I am sure I do not know whether it indicates mental weakness on his part. I can but repeat, he supposed he was a greater business man than he was. "Just when Mr. Bigelow began to take the bank's funds is a matter I am unable to determine from anything he says. When an examination of the bank was made last January nothing was disclosed. For all I know it did not begin until after that time.

"There was an absolute lack of system about anything he did so far as his own affairs are concerned. There was no plan such as a crook might devise; no carefully turning of every act toward a common point or purpose is to be discovered.

Shows Laxity of Methods.
"An instance cited by a Milwaukee man who was interested with Bigelow in mining operations shows his laxity of methods and the remarkable confidence in himself. Dividends were due on the property, which is a good one, by the way, as I understand it. The man who inquired of Bigelow for the dividend was turned upon in a brusque way which astonished him, since they had long been interested in one thing and another together. However, after a minute Mr. Bigelow reached into his inside pocket and drew forth a check for the amount of the dividend, two years old and crumpled into a wad. I don't know what to think of it."

OF ANTI-TIPPING ACT SIGNED BY GOVERNOR

All Kinds Of People Will Be Affected, And Loud Remonstrances May Be Expected.

(SPECIAL BY SCRIPPS-M'RAE.)

Madison, Wis., May 3.—The dread blow has fallen, and the waiters and waitresses, porters and bootblacks, cab drivers and messenger boys and several other classes of employees are in mourning. They are no longer to enjoy the profitable pleasure of the "tip." What was known as the anti-graft bill became a law Tuesday, when Gov. La Follette affixed his signature to the measure prohibiting employees from requesting or accepting any gratuities, and also prohibiting everybody from giving or offering any gift or tip whatever to any agents, servants or employees.

Fine and Imprisonment.
It is really a hard blow dealt by the governor's pen, if the general understanding of the law is correct. While the bill was originally aimed at the practice of paying commissions to employees of large stores or corporations whose influence went a great way in the purchase of goods, it also is contended that it applies to the practice of "tipping." A violation of the law is made a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of not less than $10 nor more than $500, or a fine and imprisonment for a year.

The demand for copies of the bill is remarkable. Everybody, apparently, wants to know the exact provisions of the new statute. Presidents of corporations, merchants and manufacturers and practically all classes of employers are seeking for information on the exact meaning of the anti-graft law. And not the least interested persons are those to whom the "tip" means the larger part of their income.

Law Wipes Out Tips.
Waiters and porters and bootblacks and barbers are in a fine stew test the law shall stop them from accepting the nickels and dimes proffered by the generous public. They fail to understand how it can be anybody's business, much less that of the state, whether they gather in a few dollars a week from people who want to give their money away. But the law is plain enough. It provides that whoever corruptly gives, offers or promises to an agent, employee or servant any gift or gratuity with intent to influence his action in relation to his employer's business or any agent or employee who requests or accepts such gift or gratuity is guilty of a violation of the law.

The law prohibits the giving of commissions to employees who make purchases, no matter whether in the form of a discount or a bonus. It goes further and provides that no person shall be excused from testifying or producing books and contracts.

Perplexity for Tip Takers.
Now the question that is perplexing the porters, waiters and barbers is whether a "tip" accepted by them from a customer is corruptly given, as described in the law. The barber wants to know how he is to tell whether a customer is going to "tip" him until he gets out of the chair and reaches into his pocket. The porter who carries a trunk up or down a flight of stairs for a traveling salesman is anxious to know if the salesman expects to influence him after the job is done and he has his "tip."

Heads of corporations, manufacturers and merchants are not complaining because the bill has become a law. They are the only ones who can see any particular merit in the law, for they count on saving many thousands of dollars in commissions.

STOP, WOMAN!

AND CONSIDER THE ALL-IMPORTANT FACT

That in addressing Mrs. Pinkham you are confiding your private life to a woman—a woman whose experience with women's diseases covers a great many years. You can talk freely to a woman when it is revolting to relate your private troubles to a man—besides, a man does not understand—simply because he is a man.

Many women suffer in silence and drift along from bad to worse, knowing full well that they ought to have immediate assistance, but a natural modesty impels them to shrink from exposing themselves to the questions and probably examinations of even their family physician. It is unnecessary. Without money or price you can consult a woman whose knowledge from actual experience is great.

Mrs. Pinkham's Standing Invitation. Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. All letters are received, opened, read and answered by women only. A woman can freely talk of her private illness to a woman; thus has been established the eternal confidence between Mrs. Pinkham and the women of America, which has never been broken.

Out of the vast volume of experience which she has to draw from, it is more than possible that she has gained the very knowledge that will help your case. She asks nothing in return except your good-will, and her advice has relieved thousands. Surely any woman, rich or poor, is very foolish if she does not take advantage of this generous offer of assistance.

If you are ill, don't hesitate to get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once, and write Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for special advice.

When a medicine has been successful in restoring to health so many women, you cannot well say, without trying it, "I do not believe it will help me."

A Visit to Edgerton.—The Cross, Business and Oil Prospects.—Avaling ourselves of the beautiful afternoon of yesterday, we paid a visit to the thriving village of Edgerton.

This place, though not large in extent, is nevertheless a considerable business point, taking a front rank among the towns touched by the Milwaukee & Prairie du Chien road.

It is located in the midst of beautiful and productive country, which sends to market large quantities of the products of the soil. The land is well improved this year and with a favorable season there will be a large crop of grain there.

But the feature which attracts the greatest interest to this locality now is the indication of petroleum which has been discovered. So strong are the evidences of oil there, that a number of staid and substantial business men of the place have organized a company for the purpose of sinking a well and testing the truth or falsity of their suppositions and theories in reference to the existence of oil at that point.

In company with A. A. Jackson, Esq., of this city, who is secretary of the company, we visited the spot and saw the first stroke which the drill made. The purpose is, if need be, to carry the well to a depth of six or seven hundred feet, which will pretty thoroughly decide the question of petroleum or no petroleum.

This corporation is composed of reliable men who have faith in the enterprise in which they are engaged, and are determined to know whether there are grounds for their belief. They are working carefully and economically, paying for everything used in sinking the well as they go. Should oil or any mineral be struck it will add a new feature of wealth to this already rich section of country. But should no such happy or desirable result be obtained, the experiment will still be worth all it costs in settling the question of the geographical formation of these fertile prairies of ours. We think the stock to carry out the work should be liberally taken. The individual cost is trifling; the results may be gratifying to the subscribers.

We also visited the spring which first attracted the attention of the citizens of Edgerton to oil in that vicinity. That oil rises to the surface of the water of the spring, is plain to be seen. What the precise nature of it is and how great the quantity, remains to be determined. It is inflammable and has other qualities of petroleum.

We wish the gentlemen engaged in this undertaking abundant success, and trust the bowels of the earth will yield to them an hundred-fold on the money invested.

Carlyle said: "A well-written life is almost as rare as a well-spent one." A well-advised store is quite as rare as a well-managed one—for the one thing implies the other.

ONE OF THE PEOPLE.

That President Roosevelt is one of the people has been clearly demonstrated time and again. His visit to the little schoolhouse last Sunday in cowboy attire, accompanied by men who associated with him long before he became a great statesman, was characteristic of the man.

While he may be criticized in some circles for the free and easy life which he so much enjoys, as well as for the "taste" developed for field sports, the fact is generally recognized that his popularity with the masses is largely due to these characteristics.

He is an approachable man and promotion from the ranks to the highest honor which the nation could bestow, has left him free from any taint of aristocracy or exclusiveness.

The people have confidence in him because of his nearness to them. They feel that he is not only in sympathy with them but that he is disposed to help them in every way possible.

The spirit of fairness to both capital and labor, which he has always displayed, has won for him the highest regard, and while corporate wealth has been given to understand that ambition must not encroach upon the rights of others, the feeling generally prevails that justice to all men is the motive which governs his actions.

The nation is fortunate in having such a president at the present time. The feeling of unrest and the disposition to adopt drastic reform measures, is more widespread today than ever before. The sentiment is also prevalent that in some mysterious way the government at Washington can settle all difficulties, and so more is expected of President Roosevelt than has been demanded of any other president.

The teamsters of Chicago are possessed of the notion that he should visit that city and in some arbitrary way settle the strike in which they are engaged. They have confidence in the man, and this feeling is so general throughout the country that centralization of power at the nation's capital is one of the new problems with which the president and his advisors are forced to deal.

The demand for government and public ownership is the outgrowth of this new sentiment and the president is obliged to meet many questions which have heretofore been foreign to the office. That he will be large enough for the occasion is not a matter of doubt.

THE CHICAGO STRIKE.

It is unfortunate for both capital and labor that the strike epidemic has struck Chicago. The cause of dissatisfaction is not wages, or hours of work, but is largely sympathetic, and that is why it fails to appeal to public sentiment.

If a strike is ever warranted, which is extremely doubtful, it should rest its demands on something more tangible than a grievance. The men who employ labor are compelled as a rule to pay the market price for the particular service rendered. They generally recognize ability and faithfulness and are not slow to reward by merited promotion.

When advancement comes it comes to the individual and not to the organization, and this is where labor unions make a mistake. A minimum wage scale is a handicap to ambition and if men would consult their own interests they would never advocate it.

The man who goes to the front gets there by his own efforts. It might be gratifying to take all of his associates with him, but that is an impossibility. The important question for every man to settle for himself is, "Shall I win through my own ability, or shall I mar my opportunities by nursing a grievance and participating in a strike?"

The governor did a wise thing in vetoing the bill which authorized the State Board of Control to grant pardons and issue paroles at the state prison. The Board of Control is a political organization, and its complex changes so often that it is practically a new board every year. The pardoning power should rest with the governor and should not be abused.

The administration organ is attempting to whip into line Senator Whippman, one of the governor's men from the ninth district. He is accused of being under the influence of Burton Hanson, general solicitor for the C. & M. & St. P. road. The senator possesses some independence and proposes to do his own thinking.

The office of public examiner will cost the state from $5,000 to $10,000 a year, but it will add another circle to the rings already existing and will prove a valuable adjunct to the game wardens et al.

Mayor Dunne of Chicago will surprise his constituents some morning by paying out $50,000,000 for street railroads before breakfast. As a hustler, he's on the list.

No bear for the president yesterday, but he expects to kill four tomorrow.

PRESS COMMENT.

Milwaukee Sentinel: Those Chicago teamsters evidently take no stock in Mayor Dunne's dictum that the "citizens own the streets."

Chicago Chronicle: What incentive will there be for the rural population to visit Chicago since Sam T. Jack's theater is no more?

Fond du Lac Commonwealth: The Chicago Tribune refers to it as the "alleged" finding of John Paul Jones' body, by Ambassador Porter.

Milwaukee News: However, Milwaukee looks bigger on the map than it did before Mr. Bigelow made his Napoleonic descent.

La Crosse Chronicle: Caesar Young is said to have spent $50,000 on Nan Patterson in one year. Does anyone think any girl would have killed a good thing like that?

Chicago Record-Herald: The czar kindly refrains from offering advice to Chicago, although he has had a good deal of experience in the art of putting down riots.

Exchange: The Superior board of education has demanded the resignation of B. B. Jackson, but that official refuses and declares that he will complete the term.

Sheboygan Journal: H. C. Frick says that the interests of equitable policy holders are absolutely safe. They would be safer if some of the Equitable officials would stop talking and get out.

Racine Journal: On June 1st the Pacific coast great exposition at Portland commemorating the expedition of the explorers Lewis and Clark will be opened with ceremonies.

New York Press: It's dangerous not to notice a new dress your wife has, because she thinks you are not interested, and it's dangerous to notice because it may be a new one you forgot to notice before.

Chicago Inter Ocean: Loneliness are beginning to taste one of the real joys of life. Popcorn has been introduced to them at last, but they have yet to experience the pleasure of buying it from an open cart in fly time.

Chicago Chronicle: Nothing more unworthy of a city official has ever occurred in Chicago than the strike conference called by Mayor Dunne and held in his office at the city hall last Sunday. He was moved to call it by a letter from such well-known organizers of society as Graham Taylor and Louis F. Post, together with certain ministers who are always willing to stand a few moments in the limelight.

These eminent reformers, whose hearts were wrung in view of the sufferings of the striking teamsters, demanded an "armistice." The word itself means "a cessation of hostilities," but they explained more fully that what they wanted was "an armistice of forty-eight hours, during which time the Employers' association shall engage no more men to take the place of striking teamsters and the teamsters shall suspend the strike—and all strike tactics." The words "strike tactics" were of course a cowardly and hypocritical euphemism for mob violence. This is the bait at which our socialist mayor eagerly bit. He appointed three socialists and two ministers as a commission to negotiate with the teamsters for a cessation of their criminal violence and attended the conference himself. The Employers' association refused to enter into any such shameful agreement and the conference was a failure.

IS MEDDLESOME BILL

Medical Measure Which Passed the Assembly Tuesday, is Unwarranted Attempt to Regulate Personal Conduct.

(From Milwaukee Sentinel.)
The substitute for bill No. 353A, which passed the assembly Tuesday morning, well illustrates the tendency on the part of a certain class of citizens to strive to impose their peculiar notions of ethics upon others who may differ with them. This is the measure that has been called the "medical bill," and it provides for the revocation of the license and certificate of registration of any physician who may be declared by the Wisconsin State Board of Medical Examiners to be guilty of "immoral, dishonorable, or unprofessional conduct." Section 2 of this bill defines what shall be considered offenses under this act.

As a matter of fact, the real offenses named in the measure are crimes under the laws of the state as they are now framed. It does not require a new statute and a new punishment to provide for cases of this character. The acts penalized by this measure that are not offenses against the laws are merely violations of the medical code of ethics. The conclusion naturally arrived at when these facts are considered is that certain members of the medical profession for whom the board of examiners are the spokesmen are attempting to incorporate into statute law the ethical rules adopted by a majority of the members of the profession.

The Sentinel has no quarrel with the eminent physicians and surgeons who believe physicians and surgeons ethical code. It entertains the same respect for members of the legal profession who, after the manner of their kind, hold to a similar code and frown upon attorneys who violate it. But it does not believe that either lawyers or doctors, in the pride of their conscientious virtue, have a moral right to ask that their personal views concerning acts that are not and cannot justly be forbidden by law shall be penalized by statutory enactment. In an opinion handed down by the supreme court of California, Justice Thornton, concurring with the majority of the court, covered this point admirably. He said:

"I can not hold that the legislature has the constitutional power to enact a law punishing a physician who has been decided to be competent to practice, as was the case with the petitioner here, when a certificate was issued to him, for what is styled 'unprofessional conduct,' and as advertising himself in a newspaper and in a pamphlet as a specialist in certain enumerated diseases. This goes beyond the police power and which power the statute to be considered was enacted. That a rule of professional conduct by a board of medical men prohibiting such advertisements, and declaring them unprofessional, can be declared a misdemeanor and punished, would extend the police power beyond whatever has been allowed. As well might the board declare that wearing any other hat than one of a white color, by a physician, should be unprofessional conduct, and cause it to be punished as a misdemeanor. The advertisement of the character mentioned does no harm to any one. It may be of benefit to the public, by giving to the subjects of the diseases mentioned information of the existence and residence of a person who has peculiar skill in curing them. Ex parte McNulty, 77 Cal., 168."

The bill in question is clearly and unmistakably designed to interfere with the practice of a certain class of specialists that have become numerous in these days of specialization. It is an attempt to revoke the license to practice held by a man who, having attended and graduated from a medical college, secured a diploma, and passed an examination in this state that demonstrated his fitness to practice his profession, shall determine to devote his time and talent to a particular line of diseases and shall make public announcement of that fact.

It is the old story of "more laws, and still more laws." As has been said, so far as the pending bill provides for the revocation of the license of physicians who are guilty of crimes, or misdemeanors, there is ample provision now for the punishment of offenders of that sort. To attempt to make a misdemeanor of a refusal to subscribe to a system of professional rules would be to take a step in advance of the anti-cigarette bill and other statutes designed to regulate personal conduct in an unwarranted and arbitrary manner. Citizens must be given some latitude, some elbow room in which to exercise the right of free choice. They cannot all be put into ethical straight jackets, nor will they be content to long submit to the tyranny of unnecessarily meddlesome laws.

The report there is that a man, name unknown, who has been near Cameron dam, says he has heard on definite authority that Dietz had been killed.

THIRD ANNUAL BANQUET OF LIMA LITERARY SOCIETY VERY ENJOYABLE AFFAIR

Elaborate Supper and Pleasing After Dinner Program Delights Delights Those Present.

Lima Center, May 2.—On Friday evening, April 28, one hundred invited guests assembled to enjoy the Third Annual Banquet given under the auspices of the Lima Literary Society, at Holbrook's hall. The decorations were festoons of maroon crepe paper, flecked with gold, which gave a very pleasing appearance. At 9 o'clock the guests were seated at one large table and partook of a dainty two-course supper, as follows:

Ham Sandwiches
Coffee
Olives
Fruit Salad
Potato Chips
SECOND COURSE.
Brick Ice Cream

Angel Food
Devil's Food
While the guests were partaking of these good things, the hall was filled with the beautiful strains of music, rendered by Tull's Orchestra. Supper being over, toasts and music were dispensed to, having been arranged by the toast mistress, Mabel Boyd.

The president, Walter D. McComb, in behalf of the members, gave a very witty, interesting and hearty address of welcome, to the guests, which was followed by a pleasing violin solo by Hall Hickman, with Miss Lottie Godfrey at the piano.

Miss Ethel Stetson gave one of her recitations in her usual charming manner. Alward McComb sang a beautiful solo, which it is needless to say was appreciated as was shown by the encore given him, to which he responded. Miss Lizabeth Vance accompanied him at the piano. Samuel Adams gave a toast to "Our Village" and made an earnest appeal for the support of home enterprises, for the advancement of our schools, and loyalty of our citizens. This was followed by a toast entitled "Reveries" by Archie McComb, in which he took us forward a number of years to the time when Lima should be a metropolis and upon the site of the little brick schoolhouse where the L. L. S. was wont to meet and discuss questions of importance, should stand a mammoth granite and marble structure, in an upper room of which were collected the records, speeches, debates, etc., of the L. L. S. He also gave a poetical take-off on each officer.

The last toast was a poem by Ruth Boyd entitled "The Lima Literary Society—Not dead, but sleeping," in which she showed that although we, as a society, would be in a torpid state during the summer months, we would wake up next winter to new life and go forth to accomplish much good.

At the close of this toast the company rose, by request, and drank a toast to the L. L. S., after which the tables were cleared and a general social time and dancing was indulged in by those who cared to stay.

The waiters were Mabel Collins, Gladys Seiden, Bessie Richmond, Gene Rose, Eva Saxe, and Elsie Dixon. Mrs. George Johnson and Miss Effie Truman served the supper which had been planned and prepared by the supper committee, with Mrs. McComb as chairman. The committee on all arrangements was comprised of Samuel Adams, W. D. McComb, Roxana Colbert, Nina Lowe, Harvey Saxe, Mrs. W. D. McComb, Mabel Boyd.

Summer Terrors

An itching, burning skin disease during the hot, sultry summer weather, is a positive terror and a veritable demon of discomfort. The intolerable itching and stinging are tantalizing almost beyond endurance, and the unsightly eruption and rough, red skin keep one thoroughly uncomfortable and miserable night and day. Eczema, Tetter, and diseases of this type are caused by acid poisons in the blood, which the heat of summer seems to warm into life and renewed activity. These fiery acids keep the blood in a riotous and sour condition, and the skin unhealthy and feverish—they inflame the pores and retard perspiration, when the whole body feels like an over-heated furnace, and the escaping poison bursts

TORMENTING ECZEMA.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May, 1895.

In 1895 I experienced at times patches on the inside of my hands that itched and burned, causing much discomfort. As time went by it grew worse. I had read medicine in my early twenties (now 50 years of age) and was convinced that I was afflicted with a type of Eczema. I consulted several physicians and a number of specialists, and used several external applications, one of which was claimed to be a certain specific. I confess, however, I had but little faith in external applications, yet I used them, receiving but slight temporary relief. In February I decided to try S. S. S. and in less than a month I experienced a change for the better, and by May of that year all symptoms had disappeared, and I found myself entirely cured, and have had no return of the disease since.

or check the outflow of the burning fluids through the skin. Only persistent and faithful constitutional treatment can do this. The acid poison in the blood, which is the real cause of the eruption, must be attacked, and when the blood has been cleared of all accumulated impurities and restored to a healthy condition, then, and only then, will a thorough and lasting cure be effected, and for the accomplishment of all this, no remedy equals S. S. S., which contains all requirements for cleansing and building up the acid blood, and invigorating and toning up the system. S. S. S. completely and permanently eradicates every vestige of poison, thus effectually preventing a fresh outbreak of the disease.

Cases that have resisted ordinary treatment for years, yield to the purifying, cooling effects of S. S. S. upon the blood, and when rich, pure blood is again circulating through the system, the itching and stinging cease, the eruption disappears, and the red, rough skin becomes soft and smooth again.

Skin diseases appear in various forms—sometimes in pustules or blisters, sores, rashes, or red, disfiguring bumps and pimples—but all are caused by a bad condition of the blood, and for which S. S. S. is a safe and effectual cure. No bad effects can come from its use, because it contains no Arsenic, Potash or other harmful drugs, but is guaranteed a strictly vegetable remedy.

If you are a sufferer from some summer terror like Eczema, Tetter, Acne, Psoriasis, Salt Rheum, Nettle Rash or kindred disease, write us about it, and medical advice or any special information wanted will be given without charge.

Our Book on Skin Diseases will be sent free to all desiring it.

KAISER WILHELM

looms up today as the dominant figure in world politics—a truly commanding personality. And like Bismarck, his famous tutor, he delights to quaff, when among friends, the fine old malt brews of the German Fatherland.

GUND'S Peerless BEER.

is a fine American beer of Commanding Superiority brewed by the "Gund Natural Process" from Nature's choicest barley-malt and hops, and water flowing crystal from granite rocks. It is the only beer brewed on "this Side" that would make the Kaiser's eyes sparkle with pleasure, because its quality would satisfy his discriminating and highly educated taste. It is marvelously rich, ripe and pure—a right royal beverage—winning the Gold Medal at the St. Louis Exposition—as a triumphant achievement in the art of brewing. "PEERLESS" when first brewed in a little log house fifty years ago—it is "PEERLESS" still.

Sold at all first-class bars and cafes. Ask for it if you want something exceptionally good—or order a trial case sent today to your home. It has never been known to cause biliousness because it is aged for months and bottled only at the brewery. Distinguished from all other beers by its fine flavor and exquisite bouquet.

Acne, Tetter Eczema Salt Rheum Psoriasis Nettle Rash

THE ITCHING WAS TERRIBLE.

Escondido, San Diego Co., Cal., Oct. 1900.

DEAR SIR:—My body broke out with a rash or eruption. The itching, especially at night, was simply terrible. It would almost disappear at times, only to return worse than ever. I had tried many preparations without benefit, and hearing of S. S. S. determined to give it a fair trial; a few bottles cured me entirely, removing every blemish and pimple from my body.

BAD FORM OF TETTER.

For three years I had Tetter on my hands, which caused them to swell to twice their natural size. Part of the time the disease was in the form of running sores, very painful, and causing me much discomfort. Four doctors said the Tetter had progressed too far to be cured, and they could do nothing for me. I took only three bottles of S. S. S. and was completely cured. This was fifteen years ago, and I have never since seen any sign of my old trouble.

The Witch of Cragenstone

"Good, sweet love, by my faith, thou wilt exchange!" he said. "Already a cage, not of gilt bars, but a huge pile of stone and mortar, with doors and windows, is in readiness for thee. From it thou art ever free to come and go, the only bars that will ever seek to stay thee being these two arms that now intertwine so lovingly about thee."

"And, prithee, happily will I stay close to thy strong protection. Oh, my dear love," she cried, with soft eagerness, "dost thou know how much thou art to me? Who else in all this cold world have I? I love thee, Godfrey!"

For answer he clasped her closer to his heart. Soon steps were heard and, looking from the window, they saw Hetty Tunstun, a white sunbonnet in her hand, running up the path. With a cry of pleasure, Margaret advanced to meet her and, taking her hand, led her into the room.

"Hetty! Stranger! Welcome!" she cried joyfully. "Methought thou hadst forsaken thy cousin."

Hetty made a shy courtesy to La Fabienne, who bowed in his most state-like fashion, and said in a low, breathless voice, "Mother has grown strangely stern of late, dear Margaret, and forbids me to visit thee, for what reason I know not."

The smile on Margaret's face faded. "Art thou didst come now with her consent?" she asked.

"Nay, sweet cousin. In the cool of the morning mother rode down the mountain to Brother Haggott's, there to spend the night, so—with a little rest of her head and a light laugh—'methought not to lose the chance to get a glimpse of thee unknown to her.'"

"I truth, sweet"—Margaret stroked her soft hair fondly—"an thy disobedience is discovered 'twill put thy people against thee sorely."

Hetty sighed. "I wot not why my mother is so hard with me. Happen I put a small flower in my hair she is greatly angered. Dost thou think such ornament sinful, Margaret?" she asked wistfully.

Her cousin smiled, and La Fabienne broke into a hearty laugh of amusement. "Poor little Mistress Hetty!" he exclaimed. "Dost never have other pleasure than singing psalms in the church?"

"Nay, unless 'tis walking home from prayers 'n' nights," she replied innocently.

Then, as he laughed again, this time more loudly, Hetty became conscious, blushed and hung her head. The sight of her pretty confusion touched Sir Godfrey.

"Here, Margaret, string thy lute," he cried, "and Mistress Hetty and I will tread a measure."

Margaret, smiling, touched the cords gently, and La Fabienne, bowing low, offered his hand to Hetty, who when she understood his meaning shrank back in alarm, with white face and parted lips.

"Nay, nay, sir," she stammered. "I must refuse thee. In our belief dance-ing is a sin that sends the soul to eternal punishment, for so our preacher hath ever taught us, and my brother Josiah would cast me out of the house as he heard I indulged in such practices."

Sir Godfrey, inclining his head courteously, walked away, and Margaret threw down her lute, interposing hastily to cover Hetty's embarrassment.

"What ails thee, nun, that thou would ask a Puritan maid to dance? Thou must excuse him, Hetty, as he knows not the pious customs of our mountain people. Come, dear Godfrey, read to us from thy new volume of Will Shakespeare. 'Twill delight sweet Hetty, who hath great love for poetry, and as for me," she added, with a smile, "thou knowest the sound of thy voice is ever music in mine ears."

In reading and pleasant converse the afternoon passed so rapidly that it was after milking time when Hetty betought herself of the lateness of the hour. Hurriedly saying her farewells, she ran down the roadway to the fence, spring over the stile and went hastily in the direction of the pasture, where the cows, unaccustomed to such irregularity, had assembled at the gates, bellowing low plaintive calls for release.

Breathless and panting, Hetty let down the bars and, picking up a stick, proceeded to urge the cattle to a greater rate of speed than was usually necessary. If her mother had returned unexpectedly she was lost! Frightened at the thought, she gave the last cow in the line a sharp prod, with the stick, who, not accustomed to such rough treatment, looked back at her reproachfully, then galloped awkwardly ahead of the others. The cows once in the barn, it was a matter of a few moments to collect the pails and stool for milking.

Other evenings Hetty sat down to this occupation cheerfully, usually singing lightly to the accompaniment of the soft sound of the milk streaming into the pail, but tonight the task was distasteful to her. She took her seat with a jerk and exclaimed irritably when the cow, in order to brush a fly from its back, whisked its tail across her face. "Keep still, thou old beldam cow! Dost think I want mine eyes scratched out of my head?"

Although under the skillful manipulations of her hands the pails filled rapidly, Hetty's thoughts were not upon her occupation, but were over the meadows at the Maryland farmhouse, with La Fabienne and Margaret. The poetical and romantic vein that ran deep in this girl's nature had been touched by the afternoon's entertainment. The handsome dress of Sir Godfrey and his gallant bearing, combined with the exquisite beauty of Margaret in her soft flowing gown of white linen, caused Hetty's little heart to ache with sympathetic yearning.

"Was ever seen such a bonny pair of lovers?" she thought. "Such trust, such evidence of love in every action! Ah, lackaday, woe is me!"

She sighed hopelessly. "No lover more gallant than a Puritan farmer, and instead of a lute a milk bucket!"

At last, her task finished, she carried the heavy pails to the dairy.

"Methought Sir Godfrey regarded me with a pleasant gaze," she said to herself as she rested on a churn near the door.

Then as a sudden thought seemed to strike her she raised her face quickly, her eyes beaming with brightness. "An I had had the roses in my hair and had worn my new lace tucker, maybe he would have admired me more," she said. "As 'tis, perchance, he might speak of me to a comely high in favor at the French court who would fall to love with his description and come bravely here to woo me."

The thought was so pleasant to the imaginative, romantic soul of little Hetty that, forgetting to pour the milk into the pans and set them away for the cream to rise, she sat on the edge of the churn, her head resting against the wall, lost in her rosy hued day dreams. With her hand in her imaginative lover's, who were a suit of light blue velvet trimmed with silver braiding, she was just making a low courtesy before the king of France when her illusions were roughly dispelled by the loud, hearty voice of Simon Kempster, who having seen his adored Hetty enter the dairy, followed in her wake to have a chat with her. From the excessive heat and the exercise of carrying a sack of potatoes a long distance Simon's face was red and perspiring; his rough suit of homespun, unbuttoned at the throat, soiled and shabby, hung loosely on his sturdy figure, and his broad farming hat made of reeds was torn and broken at the edges. He laid down the sack and entered.

Startled from her brilliant dreams by Simon's appearance, Hetty's thoughts fled from the court of the king of France and fastened themselves upon matters of the present, the most important of which were the full milk pails. Springing off the churn and returning Simon's pleased grin with an absent smile of greeting, she proceeded to fill the row of pewter pans with the white foaming milk.

Fanning himself with his broken hat, Simon watched her from his place at the door with admiring eyes. It occurred to him that Hetty had never before looked so pretty. The red color in her cheeks had heightened; her eyes were brighter; she held her little head higher, and in his estimation went about her homely task in the same manner as would have a queen. Looking at her white throat, he thought of the silver belt lying on her father's bed that he had given her and that she had received with so much pleasure—a sweet secret safe between him and Hetty—and his honest heart gave a great throb.

Stepping to her side, he asked her for a mug of milk. Hetty's pleasant afternoon and her consequent happy day dreams had left her in sort of an uplifted state. She wished good fortune to all and gave Simon the refreshment he demanded, with a smile of happiness.

"Poor Simon," she thought as she carried the first full pan to the buttery. "What a kind friend he hath ever been to me. There's many a lonely hour I would have spent without him. When my load doth come and I ride away I shall not forget Simon. Happen anon I may have influence to have him made lucky at the court."

Returning for another pan, with her heart and mind full of her good intentions, Hetty bestowed a more than ordinary sweet glance of esteem and kindly feeling upon her visitor, whose heart, always full of love for her, ached now to bursting with fancied encouragement. Only when wearing his new chocolate black suit, he thought, had she ever given him kinder glances; so, regardless of his untidy appearance, he clasped the astonished Hetty in his arms, and thoughts that for months had been filling his mind now took the form of words and surged from his lips in sentences expressing his passionate love for her.

"Art gone daft, Simon? He done, I tell thee!" she cried in angry surprise, struggling to free herself from his strong embrace.

"Hetty, say the word," he entreated. "Promise to be my wife. Pledge thy truth with me."

"Coward," she cried, "to hold a maid against her will! Dost think I want a cowboy for a husband?"

He looked his bold and drew back as if stung, with staring eyes and a face from which all color had gone.

"Thou dost not love me, Hetty?" he asked solemnly. "An' all our sweet friendship is to go for naught?"

"Love thee?" Hetty gave her head a toss. "Whoe'er put thoughts of my loving thee into thine idle brain? Nay, silly, look not so downcast," she cried, "an' take my best assurance that our friendship hath not been in vain, for so dear I hold thee in my heart that but e'en now before thou spokest thy foolish utterances I was making plans for thine advancement."

Unable to understand and much bewildered, Simon watched Hetty as she lightly lifted her skirts and, holding her head very high, walked up and down the dairy in imitation of a grand lady.

"For thou knowest, Simon," she continued, with a patronizing nod, "methought to marry a French courtier who will come upon a white steed to woo me and take me back with him to Paris, there to set me up in a grand palace, with countless serving men and women to do my bidding."

"Hetty, what nonsense is this?" Simon cried in desperation. "What man is this thou lovest?"

"'Tis no man that I'er seen as yet," Hetty continued her pacing up and down.

"But know this, Simon Kempster, that I'll have none of thee. Dost think I would better with thy little scraggly farm when I can be mistress of a grand estate? However," she concluded, "I am not a French courtier, but I am a French courtier's friend."

"Was ever seen such a bonny pair of lovers?" she thought. "Such trust, such evidence of love in every action! Ah, lackaday, woe is me!"

She sighed hopelessly. "No lover more gallant than a Puritan farmer, and instead of a lute a milk bucket!"

NEW OCCUPATION STRIKE BREAKERS

bullets have found their way into inconsequential parts of his anatomy, and one has yet to be removed. His skin is a network of scars. He wears his dark hair short and one, looking closely, can see little white marks in the scalp where missiles and clubs and blackjacks have brought blood.

Absolute Control

It takes but a few minutes, talk with this man of strange profession to understand that he has in him the stuff to control and direct others.

There is nothing of the blusterer about him; nothing in accord with the popular idea of what a man of his vocation would be. There is within an inch or two of six feet of him, and he is built on lathy, springy lines.

His hands are honey, yet well fashioned and well kept. His lower jaw is firmly hinged and runs as straight to the chin as the barrel of a Colt's forty-five. The lips are thin, but a heavy black moustache, drooping low, covers the mouth and only occasionally when he laughs does a gold tooth show in the upper of two splendid rows of teeth. The nose is Roman and fitted well into the brow, which comes out over a two blue eyes of medium size. They have been called "man-killer" eyes because of the glint of cold steel which plays in them. The forehead is high and runs full where it rounds into the temples. The head, which has little hair on top, is deeply backed and unusually wide over the ears. Withal the features are good, but the skin has an unvarying pallor except when Farley is excited and then a hectic flush appears over each cheekbone.

The Voice of a Man.

The most remarkable thing about this man is his voice. Its timbre is light and it never, under any circumstances, rises above an ordinary conversational tone, but if there was ever a mirror of character it is one. It is pleasant to hear when Farley has pleasant things to say, but otherwise there is a cruel rasp of chilled steel in it that makes one brace instinctively for trouble. I heard that rasp sound above the rattle of chains and the roar of machinery the other night in the repair shops of the Interborough Company at One Hundred and Forty-eighth street and Lenox avenue, where James Farley had his subway force of strike-breakers quartered.

Men Disquiet

There was disquiet among the men because of the sudden ending of the strike in which they thought they saw fleeing their hopes of getting positions. They had asked to see "the chief," and Farley was in no pleasant mood when he came to face them. Standing on a case of bread, with a long, crooked crozier in his hand, he looked down at the men and his hands plunged deep in his pockets, he looked over the two hundred and more of his followers, who had been commanded to appear before him, with the air of a potentate, who had but to wave his hand to have every man of them destroyed.

Some of the men had never seen "the chief" before and looked up at him with gaping mouths. The man of mystery was before them; the man who had brought them there from homes thousands of miles away; Farley, the great strike-breaker, who had been only a name, a shadow to them! As the cold blue eyes of the man on the box met pairs here and there, heads were turned down or turned away.

Suspense held them for nearly five minutes before Farley spoke a word. Farley with His Men.

"I'm Farley," he began in the cruel, low tone which comes to him at such times. "Now, look here, you fellows, I have heard that some men among you think that the square thing is not going to be done by them; that you are not going to get jobs. I promised you when I brought you to New York that I would see you were provided for, and I propose to keep my promise. The strike is broken, and I want to thank you for what you have done. I also want to tell you that the company stands ready to give every one of you, a position, and whether you keep it or lose it rests with yourself. If you are competent and work faithfully you may stay here as long as you please. I know some of you, but some I have never seen before. I say I'll do, and I never go back on it."

Farley paused suddenly and looked over his fascinated listeners again, as if searching for some one in particular. He seemed to mark every man there. Suddenly he resumed, leaning forward slightly.

Very Emphatic

"And I want to say now and for the last time if there is any man among you who feels that he wants to get out let him hold up his hand," but not a hand was raised. "Some of you have been sneaking around here that you were kidnapped from home; that you didn't know what you were coming here for. You were not kidnapped and you did know that you were coming here to break a strike. The man who says that is not so, lies," and every man there clapped his hands and cheered.

Plenty of Men

"How can I get men enough to do my work?" Farley repeated, as we settled back in his big touring automobile and swung away down town. "That is an easy proposition, but the difficulty lies in getting the right kind of men. I levy upon every class. I have three or four hundred Colombian students working for me down there in the subway now. There are a couple of lawyers there, too, and a physician, and there is a boy phoning tickets at one of the stations whom I know to be worth $300,000 or $400,000 in his own right. I presume it must be the excitement of the thing that brings them out, although I must admit there hasn't been anything very exciting about this strike. I can get together between 8,000 and 10,000 men in a week to go to any part of the country."

His Organization

"You must remember that I have things organized. I have my own staff of personal representatives, and in some corners of the country one of my clients is always employing my services. My clients? Why, the railroad companies; the street-car companies. You see, that is my specialty, and I would rather not do anything else.

"During the most strike here I received offers to take hold of the situation, but I declined. I know the street railway business and I don't know the meat business."

"What is your theory of battle? What is the first thing you aim to do when you take hold of a street-car situation," as you call it?"

The Secret of the Strikebreaker's Success.

"Keep the public riding. Give them cars that will take them where they want to go. If the authorities pressure the peace it's not a hard matter to do that," and, as he spoke, there came to my mind the letter signed by the officials of the Interborough to Mayor McCellan, declining his offer of mediation in the same language. I have no doubt but that he dictated the communication.

When Farley takes hold of a "situation" he demands implicit obedience on the part of the officials of the company for whom he is working, from the highest to the lowest in rank. That applies so far as the operation of the road is concerned, and it is said that only in cases where this rule has been broken have strikes been prolonged.

Must Have Imitators

In time Farley must have imitators, for the field which he has opened up is a most lucrative one. I have it from a good source that for two months preceding the actual strike of the Interborough employees he received $1,000 a day. Before that, when strikes seemed imminent, he was retained on two occasions with a fee of $10,000. For his work in the great Chicago strike he got $50,000. His income from "clients" is enormous the year through, for many companies pay him a stated sum for the privilege of first, second, or third calls on his services. It is estimated that he is worth from $1,000,000 to $1,500,000, all the result of his strike-breaking practice during the past ten years. He has a beautiful residence in Flatbush, and his one weakness is fast trotting horses.

"Dynamite Johnny"

This strike-breaker chief is such another man as "Dynamite Johnny" O'Brien, who has illustrated his way around, the world time and again, the difference being that revolutions do not pay, and street-railway corporations do. Times may change, but human nature follows along the same old lines. While there is no more frontier, and the great "Wild and Woolly West" has passed away with the dare-devil characters of twenty years ago, the same class of men to which they belonged remains and waits for but the opportunity to "take a chance" to show itself. The work of a strike-breaker is that opportunity.

The world is full of women whose daily life is one long struggle against diseases peculiar to their sex—quiet days and nights are full of quiet, patient suffering. The head the seat of pain and pressure—the result of nerve depression and physical weakness brought on by uterine or ovarian trouble—the nerves on edge—inclined to laugh or cry at anything—an ever present dragging in the back, hips and limbs—a feeling of utter weariness—lassitude and despondency. To these people Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills are of incomparable value, having as they do the power to rebuild, to reinvigorate and resupply every organ. Every nerve, every muscle with the lost energy, and to insure a complete return to health, strength and vigor again.

Mrs. John Bailey of Jackson St., Penn Yan, N. Y., says: "I was told that Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills were a great nerve medicine, and as I needed one badly, I got a box. My nerves were very weak—I lacked ambition and strength and my heart action was very weak. I used the Pills as directed and they made my nerves quiet and steady—the heart action strong and regular and the appetite good, my sleep became restful and I feel altogether like another person. I think as a remedy in female complaints as well, they are grand, curing the headaches and heavy, dragging feeling rapidly and easily—I know this from experience, and I am glad to recommend them." 50c a box at dealers or Dr. A. Read what Mr. J. M. Pryor, of Hantsville, Ky., writes under date of November 3, 1903: "I have had a bad case of Stomach trouble. It is certainly the best medicine in the world, and will do all it is recommended for."

If one bottle of Seven Barks will cure a bad case of Stomach trouble, two bottles will probably cure a chronic case. We don't ask you to take our word for it. Our word won't cure you, but Seven Barks will. The only sure way to find out just what Seven B
